It is official now who will be the eighth member of the Los Angeles Toro's National Bowling League team.

EIGHTH MEMBER

Bill Guyett won the player contract but Frank McCosker took the major share of the prize money.

Guyett, 36-year old father of three and former baseball pitcher, won a standard $6,500 NBL contract and will play with the Toros in their first league season beginning October 13th. He also took $216 in prize money. McCosker, of El Cajon, qualifying leader and runner-up in the finals, banked a total of $600.

Jerry Homel, general manager at Gable House, said that every match was heart-breaking to the one who lost and each wanted to be a member of the Toro team. The sportsmanship was wonderful and praised highly.

A personal note about Bill Guyett is that his father died a week before the finals. Guyett said that he was going to win the contract for his father — so that is what he did.

Be sure to attend these league games as they will be entertaining and exciting. Tickets are on sale at the desk at Cable House; ask Jack Frybaum for the information. Also, for you mothers, tickets may be purchased from Vi, the nursery "teacher" and supervisor at Gable.
